

ABSTRACT

In a coding procedure, coding parameters are selected for coding the speech signal to achieve enhanced perceptual quality of reproduced speech. At least one coding parameter value or preferential coding parameter value is selected to make a spectral response of the speech signal more uniform to compensate for spectral variations that might otherwise be imparted into the speech signal by a communications network associated with the signal processing system.